

Planning

Culminating Writing Project

Click here to view the prompt

Body ¶ 10: One of the Previously-selected Characters from Of Mice and Men:

Topic Sentence (Counterargument)	While some readers argue that _____'s [bond/lack of bond] with _____ [positively/negatively] affected [a benefit of/a detriment of/a barrier to] _____'s dream, _____'s [bond/lack of bond] with _____ actually has a [positive/negative] effect.
Opponent's Counterclaim - Name naysayer - State opponent's strongest argument - Briefly explain opponent's rationale	_____ readers might argue that _____'s [bond/lack of bond] with _____ [positively/negatively] affected [a benefit of/a detriment of/a barrier to] _____'s dream based on the reasoning that _____.
Reply to Opponent's Argument (Rebuttal) - Clearly state your position - Include a concession in part	While this reasoning is partially true, it makes more sense that _____'s [bond/lack of bond] with _____ actually has a net [positive/negative] effect. My opponent's reasoning is partially true in the sense that _____'s [bond/lack of bond] with _____ has a small [positive/negative] effect on [name a specific benefit, detriment, or barrier], in that _____. However, the net effect of _____'s [bond/lack of bond] with _____ is [positive/negative].
C Include a quote that supports your point (but without using a text selection you previously quoted)	According to the text, [speaker: character or narrator] [tells/asks/argues to] [listener], "_____" (Steinbeck ____).
E	This evidence shows that the effect of _____'s [bond/lack of bond] with _____ has more of a [positive/negative] than [positive/negative] effect on [name a specific benefit, detriment, or barrier] because _____.

Geoffrey Aguirre

Jul 11, 2022

These two portions of your topic sentence should be identical: [character 1]'s [bond/lack of bond] with [another character]

Geoffrey Aguirre

Jul 11, 2022

These portions of your topic sentence should be opposite. For example, if your opponent would argue that the bond has a negative effect, then you would reply that the bond has a positive effect.

Geoffrey Aguirre

Jul 11, 2022

Choose only one. Choose to focus on 1. a benefit, 2. a detriment, or 3. a barrier.

Geoffrey Aguirre

Jul 11, 2022

This statement should be identical to what you wrote in the first half (everything up to the comma) of the topic sentence.

Geoffrey Aguirre

Jul 11, 2022

Explain your opponent's reasoning.

Geoffrey Aguirre

Jul 11, 2022

This statement should clearly and accurately represent your claim.

Geoffrey Aguirre

Jul 11, 2022

In what sense is your opponent's counterclaim partially, in a small way, correct?

Geoffrey Aguirre

Jul 11, 2022

Explain how the quotation (and citation) you selected emphasizes your claim or detracts from the opponent's counterclaim.

Summary Statement	This evidence shows that _____'s [bond/lack of bond] with _____ actually has a [positive/negative] effect.
-------------------	--

Instructions

Each response should include:

- R / A: claim, topic sentence, thesis statement- your direct response to the prompt which shows your opinion/position on the topic.
- C: Textual Evidence / Data- Direct quotes, or paraphrased information from the text that supports your claim. Make sure you use proper MLA In-Text Citation \(Parenthetical Citation\) format to cite your evidence.
- E: Analysis / Commentary / Reasoning / Warrant- Explain how your evidence supports your claim, or it's significance.
- S: Summary Statement- Recap your claim, summarize your main points, and answer the question, "So what?"
- T: Transitions- Use transitions to show the relationship among your ideas.